

UNDECIDED

Qualified students who are admitted to the university but have not declared or been directly accepted into a major will be assigned to the Undecided Program (UND). The Undecided Program provides students with opportunities to sample introductory courses, fulfill core requirements, and take career exploration courses before choosing an academic program and major. Students who have been dismissed from their academic program may also be served by the UDC given they have earned less than 45 credit hours. Students meeting academic requirements may apply to their intended program and major at any point throughout their time in the Undecided Program; however, all students must be enrolled in a degree-granting major prior to earning 45 credit hours or risk being dismissed from the university.
